From the picturesque Texas landscape to things closer at hand, like the Sunflowers in our backyard, my home place is in the Texas Hill Country. This is where I find my inspiration, and my insight into nature.

For many years, I painted in a realistic manner. A trip to Australia taught me that art is beyond national or cultural boundaries. While my technique is generally referred to as Pointillism, it is actually much different in approach. I combine the movement found in the works of Van Gogh with the inspiration derived from Australian Aboriginal Art to create a unique style. I have chosen to paint what can't be seen, art that is not about the color I see, but the color I feel. Not just the shape but the shape's meaning. The rhythm of dots throughout the painting create an overall visual field that conveys a sense of wholeness, being alive with the movement, and shimmer of life.

The visual impact created by the dots, combined with the vivid colors of red, green, blue and orange, are a stunning combination on these large scale prints, and are guaranteed to bring excitement and joy to any quilting project.
